What People Are Saying:

"Studies show that education in first aid improves recognition of acute illness, provides quicker treatment, and improves survival rates. New Updated CPR & First Aid Guidelines¹ recommend first aid education is made universally available. First aid courses can now be delivered online, through instructor classes, or public health campaigns and do not require a hands-on element."
American Heart Association¹

"I did my training using my PS4 gaming system & Internet at home."
Dan S., Customer Service Representative

"The course was easy to understand and had good use of video, audio and text. I feel more prepared for emergencies."
Assistant Manager, Retail Store Chain

"I like the reports I receive regularly. They come to me and I get quality data to pass to my departments to create accountability to training requirements by staff."
Manager, Grocery Store Independent Chain
